RESUME OF WEEK'S SPORTING NEWS

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21.—The University of Southern California, without the services next spring of the two world's champions, Howard Drew, the sprinter, and Fred Kelly, the hurdler, both of them going through graduation, has lost two stars who have done more than anything else to put the Los Angeles institution on the athletic map. These two men kept the southern school before the sporting world. With the passing of these world's record holders, followers of the cinder path sports expect the temporary obscuring of the University of Southern California as a factor in coast track meets. Graduation appears to have played havoc pretty generally in the southland, according to reports, and the hope for the future lies in the finding and developing of youngsters now unknown to athletic fame.

Stanford university has high hopes for one of the most successful track and field seasons in its history, and is looking forward to an invasion of some of the most important eastern meets. According to report, the Palo Altoans are casting eyes on the meets to be held in the Missouri valley, Chicago and Ithaca.

The prospects are that the Cardinals will begin the year with a well seasoned team, all but three of last year's point winners being in college and eligible to compete. Tom Coleman of Los Angeles, who is registered in the Stanford engineering school, has been mentioned as a possible candidate for coach. He is a former Stanford track captain. There is also some talk to the effect that Dad Moulton, the veteran trainer, will be recalled to take charge of the athletes.

With a view to the advancement of the breeding and protection of young thoroughbreds, the Jockey club at its recent meeting, amended the rules of racing so that no 2-year-olds shall be raced before the first of April, beginning with the season of 1917. In other words the new rule will apply for the first time to foals dropped this year. Capt. Edward B. Cassatt, a prominent race horse owner and breeder, proposed this change over a year ago and its announcement then brought forth a storm of protest from associations which conduct winter race meetings. In the meantime, however, the Kentucky race governing bodies as well as the Canadian racing associations concurred in the change and the recent action of the Jockey club was the result of a general acceptance of the proposition.

Capt. Cassatt framed the rule in the interests of home breeding and to insure a sturdier race of thoroughbreds. Heretofore many promising colts and fillies have been judiciously raced at such a tender age that they became prematurely old and crippled so that they became practically useless for either racing or breeding purposes, when they should have been in their prime. The penalty that will be imposed as soon as the amendment becomes operative is the horse's disqualification from all races under the jurisdiction of the Jockey club for the remainder of his 2-year-old season.

exactly balanced the falling off of New York's exports to Germany.

A report of the secretary of the treasury is quoted to prove that the war has improved rather than injured American commerce.

The ambassador's letter in part follows:

"It is not to be expected that the United States should be wholly untouched by such a world calamity as the present war, and in the case of the American civil war it will be in your recollection that the immediate effect on France and England was an unparalleled industrial crisis which resulted in untold suffering to the working classes of those countries, hundreds of thousands being rendered absolutely destitute. It is satisfactory to note from the recent published report of the secretary of the treasury, that wholly apart from war orders, the industrial situation in this country is on a firm and healthy basis.

"With regard to the specific accusation against my government that while American trade with neutral countries has been diminished, British merchants has profited by the war measures to increase their export trade, I beg to recommend to your notice the figures given in the accompanying report, based on the official returns of American trade published by your government. You will see that while British trade, which has suffered greatly in its general volume, has increased to a slight extent in certain branches, American trade has increased to a vastly greater extent.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR TRANS. MITS REPORT TO SECRETARY LANSING

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Further arguments and statistics in support of Great Britain's denial that the merchants are profiting by British war restrictions, upon commerce at the expense of American trade, have been submitted to the state department by the British embassy in a memorandum, which was made public today with a letter of transmittal to Secretary Lansing from Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the ambassador.

The memorandum, which is supplementary to a note on the same subject handed Ambassador Page last summer by the London foreign office, reiterates the assertion that increases in British trade with neutral countries have been infinitesimal compared with the growth of similar American trade. It draws particular attention to figures showing that the increase of exports from the port of New York to the Scandinavian countries during the first thirteen months of the war
